1. Harinama Sankirtan (1st March) (ISKCON Gurugram)

Singing the Holy names of the Lord through the hustle-bustle of the market place of Badshahpur, the devotees distributed the mercy of Lord Gauranga Mahaprabhu to one and all. The devotees were very well received by the pious citizens of this opulent village. Many villagers and onlookers came forward to chant along with the procession and took the khichadi prasadam which was distributed to everyone. The Harinama culminated in Jain Mandir and prasadam was served to everyone. The Harinama sankirtan was purifying for everyone who participated in this blissful and glorious Harinama yagya.

2. Gaura Purnima shobha yatra (1st March) (ISKCON East of Kailash)

The Lord is so merciful that He does not even wait for people to pay Him a visit in the temple. At the slightest of opportunity, He ventures out to give His all auspicious darshans to the general populace.

A shobha yatra is organised before every Gaura Purnima festival. In a procession of devotees singing and dancing to the maha-mantra, the deities of Sri Sri Gaura-Nitai traverse the inroads of Bhogal and Lajpat Nagar to shower Their mercy. All those who welcome Their Lordships and take part in sankirtan are truly fortunate souls.

3. Gaura Purnima (2nd March) (ISKCON Delhi-NCR Temples)

The Lord appears in various yugas to deliver the fallen souls and take them back home back to Godhead. In the age of kali, Krishna appears as Chaitanya Mahaprabhu, to freely distribute the nectar of yuga-dharma, which is congregational chanting. With a golden complexion, the Lord attracts the conditioned souls of kali-yuga to chant the holy names and attain pure love. The appearance day of Mahaprabhu is a reminder of his magnanimity and mercy. He is most munificent because he demonstrated the path of attaining love of Krishna. Gaura Purnima was celebrated with a cultural programme depicting various pastimes of the Lord through dance and drama. Gaura-katha was organised in the main auditorium of ISKCON, East of Kailash. The temple was decorated with sweet smelling flowers. Abhishek, kirtan, transcendental chanting and resplendent darshan were the chief attractions of the celebration of the appearance of the Lord. The devotees observed fasting till moonrise which was followed by feasting on ekadashi prasadam.

4. Historic Sale of Caitanya-caritamrita sets on Gaura Purnima (2nd March) (ISKCON Punjabi Bagh)

The festive mood of Gaura Purnima was set into action right from Mangal Aarti on 2nd March, when two devotees came forward to sponsor 25% discount for whoever will purchase Caitanya-caritamrta sets that day. Next day, while hearing book distribution scores, two more devotees became so enlivened and enthusiastic to serve Lord Chaitanya that they came forward to sponsor a percentage of amount on second day as well. On Gaura Purnima and Jagannatha Misra Utsav festival, ISKCON Punjabi Bagh distributed a total of 280 Chaitanya-caritamrta sets and 50 Srimad-Bhagavatam sets, which is a historical sale figure in book distribution for the temple.

She engaged everyone by making several teams of 3 devotees each and asked each of the teams to present key points as skits or presentations from individual chapters allocated to each of the teams. DESTINY ALLOWS CHOICES OR CHOICES MAKE DESTINY?

Krishna, our eternal father is an ideal parent. If on one hand he provides all facilities for blissful living, on the other he also provides checks and balances for the long term and eternal benefit of his children. This world is created for those souls who want to live separate from God. As this is a place for those interested in living Godlessly, Krishna doesn't manifest His Godhood, His omnipotence, His omniscience directly in this world. In this world of "independent life" in which people wish to enjoy independently of Krishna, he allows people to act as per their free will but within certain limits and those limits are fixed by our past karmas. For example, an ant by its past karma has a small body, so if it bites it causes a certain amount of hurt. But a crocodile, by its past karma has a big body, and it can devour an entire person in no time. Therefore, the physical, economic and social ability of a living being is determined by his past karma. However, he does possess the freewill to make whatever he desires, of the platform earned by him. Our past karmas can give us opportunities and avenues to perform but our freewill which is used to make the choices, determines our future course. It is the combination of karmic scope or range and our deep-rooted desires which determine the quality of life we live. History is replete with examples of wrong choices which overpowered fortunate birth and destiny to harm the individual and his future.

Let's take the example of Hitler. Hitler, by his past karmas, was meant to become charismatic, influential and powerful. He could have used his freewill in a positive way, but he used it in a negative way and hence got all the negative consequences. Thus, although he attained a platform where he was extremely powerful and influential, his desires were catastrophic. The misuse of the credits that he had earned became the cause of his ignominy. All those who suffered because of him at that time, might have done some karma because of which they had to suffer. Of course this doesn't mean that everything he did was justified. When we are dealing with people in this world, we have to look at things from this life's perspective. From this life's perspective the Jews were innocent. They were brutally slaughtered and Hitler is fully culpable for that. From a karmic perspective, which works on the basis of multi lifetimes, the success or failure of one's endeavours depends upon the credits earned.

Our past karmas determine our capacity, but our present choices depend on our mentality. Krishna sees what I am doing with my capacity. By my past karmas, I may have the ability to speak in an influential way but with my freewill I will choose whether to influence people positively or negatively. Some people may use their freewill negatively and may cause enormous damage but then they will also get enormous consequences for that. Since we have no control over past karmas, the scriptures instruct us how to make our life better and our future more wholesome.

All activity, good or bad, is binding because it will require us to take a body suitable for enjoying or suffering the consequence of good or bad deeds respectively. As this is a relentless cycle, how can we break free from it?

The answer lies in the scriptural injunction of performing those activities which don't bind you to the cycle of birth and death. Karma which liberates rather than binds is the primary teaching of Vedic literature. The science of soul teaches us to perform activities recognising our true self: "I am not the body, I am the soul."

Celebrated for a month, this year this festival will commence on 15th April.

Her appearance day will be celebrated with abhishek, kirtan and feast. On this most auspicious occasion, the devotees can take darshan of the lotus feet of Janaka-nandini, which happens only once in a year.

5. Narsimha Caturdasi (29th April) (ISKCON Delhi-NCR Temples)

In the Bhagavad-gita, the Lord declares that He advents in this worlds with a two-pronged mission, one, to annihilate the demons and second, to protect the devotees. Furthermore, it is understood that the Lord's motive to protect the devotees is far more superior to any other motive. This is exemplified in His appearance as Lord Narsimhadeva for the protection of His beloved Prahlada Maharaja. As a child of 5, Prahlada Maharaja exhibited the purest qualities of bhakti, which made him very dear to the Lord. To annihilate his demoniac father who inflicted innumerable atrocities on his Vaishnava son, the Lord took the form of half lion and half man. In this incredibly beautiful incarnation, the Lord reinforces His declaration that "His devotee never perishes". The appearance of Lord Narsimha will be celebrated with abhishek, kirtan and fasting till dusk. This day is of utmost importance to the devotees who are offered protection from all impediments and obstacles to spiritual life by the mighty and supreme Lord Narsimhadeva.
